A Vision of the People's Good

IN his issue of September 22, Mr. H. A. Sturges, Editor of the Republic of Beresford, S. D.,
prints the following editorial:

"The Republic has carried for a long time a series of messages in the form of advertisements, ordered and paid for by the Standard Oil Company (Indiana).
There is a notion on the part of many that everything that a corporation does is of a selfish nature, and that there never is a vision of the people's good.
These messages have carried an entirely different tone, and we believe they are worth reading from week to week. The data this week is very interesting."

This recognition of the sincere effort which the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has put forth through these advertisements to inform the public as to its purposes, policies and ideals, is gratifying.

In the opinion of the seven Directors of this organization, the business of this Company should be,
and is, an open book.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is an institution performing an essential service in a highly specialized branch of industry.

This Company is owned by 21,188 individuals, not one of whom owns as much as 10 percent of the capital stock.

The management of this Company centers about seven men, who constitute the Board of Directors.
Each one is a specialist in one or more branches of the petroleum industry, and devotes all of his time to the business and affairs of this Company. Not one of the Directors has inherited his job; he has earned it.

Individually, and collectively, the Board of Directors believes that the business in which this Company is engaged is so vital, so important to the commercial and domestic life of all the people of the eleven states it serves, that they have caused to be published this series of advertisements, that the people may know how the business is being conducted.

Further, the 25,000 men and women who make up this organization are putting forth such enthusiastic, painstaking efforts to do a good job for the Company, and in turn, for the people, that the Directors are glad to tell the public what is being done.

Through these advertisements they are giving an account of their trusteeship to the people frequently, as they do to the stockholders annually.

This is the purpose of this campaign of advertisements, on which the publisher of the Beresford Republic has seen fit to comment favorably.

CHAPTER XLV.

I did not expect the first few days to go very well, so I was not disappointed at the moodiness on Win's part. In fact, I was so tired that I did not notice particularly.

I had started out half dead and the last evening had nearly taken all my strength. But the house was turned over to me sweet and clean and I had little work to do. I had mailed an order for a little to the grocer in the village, and we were well supplied with provisions.

For a few days I unpacked, hung away clothes, re-arranged the house to make it more cheerful. I blessed Win's mother for having taught me quick ways to get meals, and my dear old nurse and housekeeper for the efficient method of doing work. But she had shown me. I lived almost in the village the first days.

Yet I was so tired that when I cleared away the last of the dinner dishes I was glad to go to bed. I slipped on the little living room rug, reading a paper and smoking endless cigarettes. He had evidently made up his mind to be miserable, and he was really having a good time being that way.

I sat him alone. After all, that was the wisest thing to do. And the week end after we were settled, I had Nedda down here, and Nedda and I began to enjoy myself again. I went to bed early and often slept in the afternoon. I was out-doors digging in the garden, strolling in the sun and wind, weeding my flowers. I read up books on gardening to make up for my lack of knowledge and I made friends with the women of the village. They were all so kind and helpful, and I was so glad to be regarded as bride and groom, and smiled at with that reminiscent kindness which only comes to the eyes of a newly married couple.

"What an awful hole, there isn't a thing to do," Win would grumble. I looked out from the porch of the house. The lawn sloped to a low white painted fence. Beyond the road was a stone wall, and a field that dropped down toward a creek. A full moon hung over the country, and could see miles of it from where we stood. The hills rose gently toward the clear blue and silver of the sky, a waving line that our eyes followed for long distances.

Behind us, in the valley, the town lay, a patch of little lights gathered together in a hollow. Our house was high, one reason why I had chosen it. Like a like daylight, let's go for a walk.

Win too bored to stay at home, was ready enough. I threw a cup around me and we tramped to the hill above our house, we could see it.

ANSWERED LETTERS

Daisy—You should weigh 110 pounds. You are the Irish type.

J. A. S.—If you refer to the new hair tonic that has been in the paper, you will surely get results. The hair tonic, which is used with the tonic, is merely to tint these stray hairs that have turned gray; in this case, the henna is used in the shampoo, but not allowed to remain on the hair, but is washed off. For the actual tinting required in washing the hair, use the henna.

Eleven—Cocoa butter is a nourishing oil that comes in cake form and is used in making all sorts of body butters. For the actual tinting required in washing the hair, use the henna.

Reader, Margaret, Blith, S. M. Anderson, Peggy, Fat, Little, Zephyr—At 25 years, five feet two inches, the weight should be 110 pounds. At 30, four feet four inches, weight should be 120, though, five pounds less would be all right; at 35, five feet seven inches, weight should be 130; at 40, four feet four inches, weight should be 110; at 45, five feet seven inches, weight 115; at 50, five feet four inches, weight about 120; at 55, five feet seven inches, weight 125; at 60, five feet seven inches, weight 130.

Thankful, Daisy—To overcome nits or vermin in the hair, first wash the hair in kerosene. Tie up the hair over night so as not to stain the neck, and morning shampoo with hot water and soap, and dry. This kills the active vermin. Then soak the hair and scalp in vinegar, to loosen the

Heart and Home Problems

By ELIZABETH THOMPSON.

Letters May be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: As it all right for two girls to go for a week to the country, where they can be alone? We got chances to go in the evenings and Sunday afternoons. We have had a lot of chances this vacation, but have turned them down. The boys who go with the same boys that we turn down and some other boys from other towns and report that they have had good times. Please advise me.

Some girls are all right wherever they are and others are bound to get into mischief. Buggy and car riding usually means "spooning," which is not right. If you wish to go to the country, you will have to go with a boy who would not go very far before the boys would try to make love to you. Remember to keep yourself worthy for the man you will marry.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of 16. I have rarely gone with many boys, only a few from my own home town. Do you think it right for me to go with strange boys? Never go steady with any one as I am too young yet.

A girl friend of mine and I have had several chances to go with boys for buggy rides, but as we did not know them we refused. Two boys asked us to go riding but we only knew their names and nothing about their characters and so we refused. Another doesn't care if I go with boys, but as it may not be best I refuse. All the other girls go and have a good time, but I am in doubt as to what to do.

Would you advise me to go with boys and get acquainted or what would you do? The boys all act nice as far as we know. Any advice would be greatly appreciated.

Never pick up an acquaintance with boys on the street. To do so would cheapen your reputation so that you would not have respectable friends. You will have more fun later in life if you are careful about what you do now. I would not advise buggy or automobile rides.

"E. E." You might be able to take a course in nursing in a hospital. It would pay to inquire at least. Since you have no children, divorce seems to me wise. To live with a slovenly husband who strikes and pinches you is degrading. I believe you should admit your mistake to your parents and accept their help. Be broad enough to smile when they say, "I told you so."

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am fat and I make me look very badly. The

An Impatient Patient

The Flemings occasionally took week-end motor excursions, on which they carried a partitioned tent, and had what they called "contacts with nature."

Sue Fleming, the rollicking daughter, organized one of these trips herself. It was to take in the lake country. But that wasn't the important part. It was to spend from Friday to Monday. But that wasn't the big idea.

This was Sue's mid-autumn madness. She deliberately schemed to bring her mother and father to the lake. The thing she wanted was to be the guest. He would find a week-end's experience of her capriciousness. The only child and the one who never is satisfied and who cannot come with it. This will also coarsen the pores, which will be so clogged with this heavy secretion, it becomes the harbor for soil and the breeding place for bacteria. As also come from this internal derangement. Three cakes of yeast each day will be helpful in these cases, as the yeast supplies food elements which help people to have naturally healthy and a simple astringent such as witch hazel will act as a mild astringent that will soothe the skin and refine the pores.

She was in despair, and when she awoke the next morning, after a restless night, she really looked ill. Loring said, "You are so impersonal," she complained, "you act as if it might be anybody's pain."

Loring suddenly stood up. "I know what pain is," he said, "and I'll send your mother in with some warm water for you to drink." He quickly left the tent.

you live, and if you look closely I believe you can see some tall chimneys belching out smoke."

"Then the smoke must come from some ocean steamers in port, for these Chinese cities don't have very tall chimneys. However, we can tell shortly by going nearer."

So they went in the direction of the smoke and in half an hour they were in plain sight of the chimneys, which turned out to be smokestacks on an ocean liner.

"Hurrah!" said Billy. "I see our way to get out of the land of the headless Chinese and the Russian and Japs may fight it out to suit themselves. I don't care who wins Manchuria, the country they are fighting for, only so I get away."

(Wednesday you'll hear what luck they had getting away.)

A New York silk merchant went to the bank to get his note renewed. "I am sorry," said the banker, "but it will be absolutely impossible for me to renew your note."

The silk merchant's face paled. After a moment of thought he looked up at the banker and said: "Where you ever in the silk business?"

"Why, of course not," answered the banker.

"Well, you're in it now," said the silk merchant as he picked up his hat and went out.

The new guard was not familiar with a certain railway run in Wales.

Came a station which recited in the more time to wait on a damned old in a. Landlord, chatanvillogerch. For a few minutes he stood looking at the signboard in mute helplessness. Then, pointing to the board, and waving his other arm toward the carriage, he called, "if there's anybody there for here, this is it!"

The old man regarded his last unmarried daughter critically.

"Let me see, Alice," he reflected, "young Smythe has been calling on you regularly for six or eight months, hasn't he?"

"Yes, father," whispered Alice.

"Well," continued her parent, "if he asks you to marry him when he comes tonight, tell him to see me. Understand?"

"Yes, dada," giggled Alice. "But suppose he doesn't ask me to marry him?"

"Em!" reflected papa. "In that case, just tell him I want to see him."

BILLY WHISKER

By FRANCES TREGO MONTGOMERY

Billy Jr. and Stubby did not know how long they had been asleep, when they were awakened by the moon coming up and shining squarely in their faces.

Feeling very much refreshed, they decided to travel on a few miles farther to be on the safe side in case any of the soldiers should be sent back to the stream for water. This was a very likely thing to happen, as water was scarce in this part of the country.

In the morning, the minute the sun was up, Billy ran to a high hill he saw before him, to get his bearings, and Billy Jr. followed him. They had been traveling in a southeasterly course. By continuing in this direction, they would reach the seacoast in the shortest possible time, and by following the stream, Billy Jr. knew by experience that it was likely to flow directly into the sea or into some river that would empty there by and by.

So they decided to follow it and see where it would bridge them out.

In this way they might have all the water they wanted to drink at any time. And water is a good thing where one is traveling and getting thirsty often. Besides, it would be easier for Stubby to catch things to eat, such as muskrats and birds, than off the barren ground away from the stream, and Billy Jr. could feed the soldier in branches that grew green leaves from the bushes that bordered the stream.

At the end of a week, they came out on the seacoast and saw the blue waters of the Pacific sparkling in the sunshine.

"Now for home and friends!" said Billy Jr. "And I am never going to stop until I get back to the old farm and see my dear, old father and mother again and my darling twin sister, Day."

"I wonder," said Stubby, "how far it is to the nearest place large enough for seagoing vessels to come in?"

"It can't be so very far, Stubby, for

TESTED RECIPES

Corn Chowder—Three medium sized potatoes, cut in small cubes; one-quarter pound salt pork, diced; one small chopped onion, four cups scalded milk, three tablespoons butter, two cups corn, cut from cob; salt and pepper.

Cut pork in small pieces and fry until browned. Add onion and cook until tender but not broken. Add corn and milk and heat to boiling point.

Season with salt and pepper, add butter.

Common crackers may be soaked in milk and added just before serving.

Stuffed Tomatoes—Select large, smooth tomatoes of uniform size. Cut a slice off the stem ends, and with a small spoon carefully scoop out the seeds. Place one cup of bread crumbs in a bowl, add a teaspoon of grated onion, half a teaspoon of salt, a speck of cayenne, and moisten with a tablespoon of melted butter. Fill the tomatoes with this stuffing, heaping it in the center.

Stories of Great Scouts

By Elmo Scott Watson

"LONESOME CHARLEY" REYNOLDS CUSTER'S SCOUT

Many noted scouts served with Gen. Custer during his Indian campaigns, but his favorite of them all was Charles Reynolds, known as "Lonesome Charley." Reynolds was the son of a farmer in the town of Lincoln, N. D. He was a quiet little man who lived much to himself and preferred to hunt alone, but he was a very brave and true scout. Because of his disregard for human companionship he became known by everyone as "Lonesome Charley."

Reynolds first served under Custer in the exploration of the Yellowstone country in 1873. During his expedition two unoffensive civilians with Custer's command were murdered by the Indians. The next year, while Reynolds was attending a sun dance at the Sioux near Fort A. Lincoln, N. D., he heard a young chief named Rain-in-the-Face boast of the murder of the two men. Reynolds reported this to Custer and Rain-in-the-Face was arrested and imprisoned. Later he escaped and sent back his now famous vow of vengeance of the whole Custer family.

"Lonesome Charley" was with Custer during the expedition of the Black Hills in 1874. When gold was discovered, at Custer's request he rode 1500 miles through a country swarming with hostile Indians to Fort Laramie. After 48 hours, and gave to the world the first news of the discovery, causing a stampede of miners into that region.

When Custer started on his last campaign against the Sioux in 1876, Reynolds was offered the position of chief guide.

When the Seventh cavalry left the steamer Far West, Reynolds was ill. Captain Grant March of the Far West tried to persuade him not to go with the expedition since he was in no condition to do any fighting. Reynolds refused.

"I've been waiting and getting ready for this expedition for two years, captain, and I'd rather be dead than miss it," he said earnestly. So he rode away to his death.

When Custer divided his command to attack the Sioux on the Little Big Horn, the scout was sent with Major Reno. The Indians swept in upon Reno and forced him back to the wooded bluffs across the river. "Lonesome Charley" was killed in this retreat. His body was found surrounded by 60 empty cartridge shells. He had died fighting.
